the other side of alzheimer's

This penetrating lyrical memoir considers how mind and memory shape our perception of "reality", and how they recoil and resurrect, revoke and reveal. Caring for her mother for 7 years and recording their conversations, Cathie Borrie learned that memory has the power to uproot and to heal, and that love, loyalty and listening provide a canvas for the magical and limitless potential of the changing mind.

Cathie Borrie

"Immensely lyrical and moving . . . a powerful display of Cathie Borrie's talent as a writer."

- Steven Galloway, author of The Cellist of Sarajevo
